1 Transportation and Special Contracts rate classes. Staff made usage and revenue adjustments
2 to customers in these classes if it was determined after looking at the months of May through 3 September, compared to the test year, that usage varied greater or lesser than ten percent. This 4 criteria was used by Staff after reviewing individual customer usage for the Large Customer 5 Transportation, Interruptible, and Special Contracts rate classes and observed that most 6 aggregated usage from May through September in the true up period compared to the same 7 months in the test year had variations that typically fell within ten percent. Staff concluded that 8 usage fluctuations beyond ten percent are reasonable to trigger warranted usage and revenue
9 adjustments. Based on this criteria, Staff made usage and revenue adjustments to seven 10 customers in the Large Volume Transport Class and usage and revenue adjustments to one 11 customer in the Special Contracts Class.

12 Q. What is the amount that these adjustments reflect in terms of usage and revenue 13 for these customer classes?

14 A. Staff increased usage by over 1,136,310 Ccf for the Special Contracts Class
15 resulting in a revenue increase adjustment of $430,036. For the Large Volume Transport Class, 16 Staff increased usage by 299,773 Ccf, resulting in an revenue increase of $27,630.

17 Q. Does this conclude your testimony?

18 A. Yes.
