Our Investors

Clean Line Energy is supported by investors who bring long-term perspective, patient capital and an understanding of the complexity of siting and building long distance, interstate infrastructure projects.

Clean Line's investors include the Houston-based Zilkha family, funds associated with ZBI Ventures, and National Grid.

ZBI Ventures is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ziff Brothers Investments, the private investment firm of the New York-based Ziff family. ZBI Ventures focuses primarily on private equity investments in the energy and energy-related sectors.

National Grid is one of the largest investor-owned energy companies in the world, with extensive experience building, owning and operating large HVDC electricity transmission interconnectors and transmission networks in the US and the UK. National Grid shares Clean Line's vision of enabling a cleaner energy future by investing in transmission projects that facilitate the development of renewable energy resources.
