Dear Mr. Rainwater:

I operate a small business in unincorporated Saint Louis County that unfortunately is heavily reliant on your Company's ability to provide consistent, uninterrupted electrical power. Over the last two months, my business has experienced no less than four power outages. As we are running high speed, precision CNC machines, each of these power outages at a minimum causes me to reset all my machines costing me numerous hours of employee compensation. Two of the outages did even further damage to my machines causing several days of down time and resulting in the inability to service our customer's needs. In addition, on two of the occasions, the power was off so long that I had to send both my first and second shift home early with pay.

I realize that we are not one of your most important customers, but it is small businesses like mine that pay the lion's share of the costs associated with your infrastructure and organization. Like you, I am attempting to run a business, make money and keep people employed. As you are one of my most important suppliers, your reliability is critical to making this happen.

I would ask that you personally look into this situation and help me understand what your Company is going to do to ensure that I get the service levels that I expect.

Sincerely yours,

Daniel T. Ladenberger
President
