No! I disagree w/ all of this & am vehemently opposed to it.

I dont want it on/over/near my property. I + would be simple to move the line off of my proposed property line to the intesection, cutting the properties affected ~~from~~ from 4 to 2.

I will be contacting every possible resource available to stop this!

My Brother raises organic crops and as it shows the land next to his is a possibility for the line to go through. This is his only source of income and I feel it could hurt his ability to grow crops on my Mom's land. This would destroy his chance to be certified as organic if this touches the property.

I think the North Eastern route would be the best route, due to the fact there is less residential, my family has worked hard to clear and maintain their property, to keep it looking nice, so I think if you have to clear the right of way, then so be it.

(Example: Bulldoze trees, cross creeks, whatever?)

If the powerline happens to come down, and kills a ~~bird~~ animal, they can be replaced my grandchild cannot.

How about the interference on our internet service, a lot of people work from home, they depend on their internet service / I am not in favor of this line coming through at all.

It does not take much to leave a sour taste in ones mouth when private money scoops up a huge amount of government funding to steam roll over property owners to permanently devalue their property. There is no amount of ~~the~~ financial compensation to ever overcome that.

 ( AVOID putting structure in middle of field

I understand govt mandated "green energy" is basically inevitable, but the attempt to stay on current roads, easements, power line paths seems like the least that could be done. Random destruction and devaluing of property seems senseless and difficult. ~~Maybe put it underground on major highway right of ways,~~

The "green energy" push is very sad honestly. No one at this meeting could give me a straight answer on how much $/kwh this solar was going to cost people. The presentation boards also have pictures of row crop fields that conveniently do not have power lines through the fields. This whole project is going to hurt local farmers and families more than help through devaluing farms you've senselessly cut through instead of following existing easements. There's no hiding that farms with these kinds of massive, expensive, senseless power lines cutting through or along them are worth much less than beautiful farms such as the ones used on your poster boards.

I do not want this line to come into Callaway County. I don't want it on my son's land because he may put irrigators on it he already has the lake + the pipe for irrigation in place. I don't want to farm around it. my son and I farm together.

I also don't want this to go on my neighbors land — their land is as important to me as my own land.

Don't tell me this has nothing to do with the Ranger Power Solar field at Kingdom City.
