EDES R STATEMENT OF POSITION

45. Retirement:

- a. Should Empire be required to externally fund, through a Rabbi Trust, its SERP benefits obligation?

Position: Yes. In a Stipulation in Case No. EM-2016-0213, Empire agreed to the following:

Empire will, within one year after the Transaction closes, cause to be performed an actuarial analysis with the intention of determining whether a SERP funded via a Rabbi trust according to the SERP plan is less expensive to ratepayers than benefits paid from Empire’s general funds for the life of the plan (the “Study”). The current SERP recipients shall be included in the development of all assumptions and allowed review and analysis of the Study. If the Study concludes the annual costs and expenses of funds contributed by Empire using a Rabbi trust (including contributions to the trust) to provide benefits are essentially the same or less than the costs and expenses to ratepayers of providing the alternative of SERP benefits from Empire’s general funds, Empire will discuss the results of the Study with Staff and OPC, and to the extent neither party oppose the rate recovery of the Rabbi trust in place of the SERP funded from general funds, Empire will fund a Rabbi trust according to the plan.¹

As reflected in the direct testimony of William Gipson, the required actuarial study indicates that funding a Rabbi trust would be “essentially the same or less than the costs and expenses to ratepayers” of continuing to pay SERP benefits out of general funds. As such, Empire should be required to externally fund a Rabbi trust for SERP benefits.

The funding of a rabbi trust is consistent with other benefits for Empire retirees. Specifically, Empire currently maintains an external fund for pensions as well as other post-employment benefits.² Furthermore, like a pension plan, an external fund for SERP benefits may also benefit ratepayers in that it allows for an opportunity for these funds to be invested, thus lowering the future amount to be recovered from ratepayers. Finally, the creation of an external fund has the added benefit of promoting intergenerational equity. As Mr. Gipson points out

Immediately following the merger the SERP plan was terminated. As such the SERP benefits are related to compensation for former Empire officers. These are costs associated with service received by customers in the past. The notion of intergenerational equity dictates that customers that receive the benefit of service should be the ones to pay the costs of that service. It is inequitable for certain customers to receive the benefit of utility service, but then expect later generations to pay for the cost of that service. In this case, customers in previous years have received the benefit of service, but since they did not pay the SERP benefits under the pay-as-you-go approach, they did not pay their full cost of service. Instead, the cost of the SERP benefits are pushed off to later generations of Empire customers. The pre-funded method of accounting for SERP benefits would help to correct this inequity by bring the cost of service much closer in time to the time at which the electric service was received.³

Recognizing that the creation of a Rabbi trust for SERP benefits is justified under the actuarial analysis and consistent with the stipulation from Case No. EM-2016-0213, the Commission should require Empire to externally fund a Rabbi trust. That said, however, EDESR supports the provision set forth in the Non-Unanimous Stipulation and Agreement which calls for a meeting between EDESR, Staff, OPC and Empire to discuss the findings of the actuarial report and the ratemaking associated with externally funding SERP benefits.
