RESPONDENT CITY OF PEVELY'S RESPONSE TO COMPLAINANT'S REPLY TO PEVELY'S DENOMINATED AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION FOR SUMMARY DETERMINATION

COMES NOW Respondent, City of Pevely, Missouri ("Pevely"), and for its Response to Complainant's Reply to Pevely's Denominated Affirmative Defenses in Support of its Motion for Summary Determination, states as follows:

INTRODUCTION

As Staff of the Missouri Public Service Commission ("Staff") acknowledges, it is Staff's burden as the claimant for summary determination to establish not only the viability of its claim, but also to prove that Pevely's affirmative defenses fail as a matter of law.<sup>1</sup> As discussed in Pevely's Suggestions in Support of its Answers and Objections to Complainant's Motion for Summary Determination and further below, Staff has failed to meet either, much less both, of these burdens.<sup>2</sup>

24. The Commission has not previously exercised any authority under § 247.172 RSMo. 2000, to govern agreements the type of which the Respondents are alleged to have entered.

In an effort to demonstrate the non-viability of this affirmative defense, Staff alleges that this assertion is wrong as a matter of fact and cites Exhibit A, which is “a list of 23 water territorial agreement cases taken up by the Commission over the past twenty years” prepared in response to one of Pevely’s Data Requests.<sup>3</sup>

First, as Exhibit A demonstrates and as the statements of Staff make clear, the agreements listed in Exhibit A over which the Commission has supposedly exercised authority under § 247.172<sup>4</sup> involved voluntary applications for the Commission’s approval of agreements – Staff’s twenty-year review of cases revealed no instance where the Commission took affirmative action to assert jurisdiction over an alleged territorial agreement like it has done in the present case.<sup>5</sup> In fact, Staff admits that “[t]his case is unique and thus unlike any other Commission proceeding concerning Territorial Agreements.”<sup>6</sup>

Second, from a review of Exhibit A, not all of the 23 agreements involved only public water supply districts and municipal water utilities, such as the case here, but rather a water corporation was included as a party. Nor did all of the agreements involve the Commission's exercise of authority pursuant to § 247.172. For example, the very first case listed involved an Application of Missouri-American Water Company for the Approval of an Agreement with the Chariton County Public Water Supply District #2 to Sell and Deliver Water for Resale and Related Tariff Sheets.<sup>7</sup> In its Order dated May 29, 2013, granting the application in that case, the Commission stated that it had jurisdiction to decide the application pursuant to § 393.150, RSMo. 2000; its Order made no mention of § 247.172.<sup>8</sup> The agreement in that case was not even a "territorial agreement," as it merely provided for the water corporation's sale and delivery of water to the public water supply district for resale.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Pevely has employed the same approach as Staff in numbering and bolding the affirmative defense at issue and addressing Staff’s reply in normal text.

<sup>3</sup> Staff’s Reply to Respondents’ Denominated Affirmative Defenses in Support of its Motion for Summary Determination, pg. 2. Staff states that it prepared this list in response to Pevely’s Data Request. See Staff’s Reply to Respondents’ Denominated Affirmative Defenses in Support of its Motion for Summary Determination, pg. 2, n. 5. Staff is apparently referring to the following Data Request made by Pevely: “Please provide a list of all territorial agreements between public water supply districts and municipal water utilities which the Public Service Commission has approved, denied approval, or sought to enjoin pursuant to § 247.172 RSMo., since 1994.” See Staff’s Responses to Pevely’s First Set of DRs, at ¶ 2 (emphasis added).

25. The Commission has not previously exercised any authority with respect to the alleged agreement since November 12, 2007.

Staff admits this assertion to be true, but argues that it provides no basis for avoiding any element of Staff's Complaint.<sup>10</sup> Later, in response to Pevely's defense of laches, Staff argues that Pevely has not pleaded any facts showing that "Staff unaccountably neglected to act over a prolonged period of time."<sup>11</sup> The admitted absence of any attempt to exercise authority over this alleged agreement for almost six years goes to support Pevely's defense of laches.

26. The Commission and Complainant have not given any prior notice to the Respondents that it intended to enforce § 247.172 RSMo. 2000, so as to have any application to the alleged agreement.

Staff argues that the legislation itself has given Pevely all the notice it needs,<sup>12</sup> admitting that neither it nor the Commission has ever provided Pevely with any sort of notice prior to these proceedings.<sup>13</sup> The statute has not provided notice that it would apply to the Respondents' alleged agreement because it is open to interpretation. Staff admits that this is unlike any other proceeding concerning territorial agreements ever before the Commission – that it has never before interpreted the statute to apply in this situation. How could Pevely have notice of Staff's interpretation of the statute when Staff itself only recently formulated that interpretation? As discussed in response to affirmative defense no. 32, the statute at issue has not provided Pevely with constitutional notice that its conduct would violate the law.

27. The Commission and the Complainant have failed to give § 247.172 RSMo 2000 its most liberal interpretation despite the fact that it contains penal provisions.

Staff argues that it has given § 247.172 the interpretation required by its plain language.<sup>14</sup> For the reasons set forth in its Joint Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim Upon Which Relief Can be Granted, Memorandum in Support of Their Motion to Dismiss, Joint Reply to Staff's Response to Motion to Dismiss, and Petition for Rehearing Regarding Order Denying Motion to Dismiss, which are incorporated by reference herein, § 247.172 does not apply to this case by its plain language because no water corporation is involved and because the dispute does not involve an approved agreement. In addition, as discussed in Pevely's Suggestions in Support of its Answers and Objections to Complainant's Motion for Summary Determination, Staff has not proven that an active agreement existed between Respondents, much less one that constitutes a “territorial agreement” as that term is used in § 247.172.

Finally, as discussed in response to affirmative defense no. 32, the statute did not provide Pevely with constitutional notice that its conduct would violate the law. Staff has admitted that these proceedings are unique and unlike any other proceeding before the Commission. It has never interpreted § 247.172 to apply to this situation and has given Pevely no notice of its intent to do so.

28. Respondent had the right to rely on the procedures and methods of the Commission as administered as to agreements which are the subject of Complainant’s allegations.

Staff states that it does not understand Pevely’s assertion and therefore denies it, yet it admits that “[t]his case is unique and thus unlike any other Commission proceeding concerning Territorial Agreements.”<sup>15</sup> This admission is precisely the point that Pevely has made in its affirmative defense – the Commission has never (or at least not within the last 20 years) attempted to affirmatively exercise jurisdiction over an alleged territorial agreement between a municipal water district and a public water supply district.<sup>16</sup> This is admittedly a new interpretation for Staff in enforcing § 247.172. Pevely had a right to rely on the Commission’s procedures and methods. By attempting to exercise jurisdiction in this case, the Commission’s exercise of authority is inconsistent with its prior procedures and methods. These facts support Pevely’s claim for estoppel, as discussed more fully below.

29. Any fine imposed as a result of this Complaint would be borne by Respondent and its citizens.

Staff admits that this assertion is true, but insists that it is not an impediment to summary determination.<sup>17</sup> In doing so, however, Staff ignores the language set forth in 4 CSR 240-2.117(E) requiring that before it may grant summary determination, the Commission must conclude that it is in the public interest. If Respondents and its citizens are going to be subjected to fines, then it is only in the public interest to conduct full discovery and to hold an evidentiary hearing on these far-reaching issues of law.

In addition, the public should not bear the costs of Staff's newly crafted interpretation of § 247.172. Pevely has received no notice of the Commission's intention to enforce § 247.172 against the alleged agreement because the Commission only recently interpreted the statute to allow for such enforcement.

30. No citizen of the State of Missouri has made any complaint regarding the agreement between the Respondents.

Staff asserts that this claim is factually inaccurate and claims that it learned about this matter from the complaint of John F. Holborow, receiver of H & H Development Group, Inc.<sup>18</sup> As part of its data requests, Pevely received from Staff the alleged complaint made by Mr. Holborow.<sup>19</sup> A review of Mr. Holborow's letter, however, reveals that he did not complain about the alleged agreement between Respondents but rather, questioned whether the Consolidated Public Water Supply District C-1 of Jefferson County Missouri (the "District") had the authority to cut service to Valle Creek Condominiums ("Valle Creek"). He also noted that Pevely was willing to continue to serve Valle Creek in the future. His letter demonstrates that the Respondents were not living up to the document they titled "territorial agreement" nor had the agreement displaced competition between them, as required by § 247.172.

31. The Commission lacks jurisdiction over the subject matter of the Complaint.

Staff states that the Commission has already determined this issue against Pevely.<sup>20</sup> While this Commission has issued rulings in connection with some jurisdictional issues, those determinations are not yet final judgments and do not address all of the jurisdictional issues. Pevely incorporates by reference the points and arguments made in Respondents' Joint Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim Upon Which Relief Can be Granted, Memorandum in Support of Their Motion to Dismiss, Joint Reply to Staff's Response to Motion to Dismiss, and Petition for Rehearing Regarding Order Denying Motion to Dismiss, and in addition, as discussed in Pevely's Suggestions in Support of its Answers and Objections to Complainant's Motion for Summary Determination, Staff has not proven that an active agreement existed between Respondents, much less one that constitutes a "territorial agreement" as that term is used in § 247.172 because the alleged "territorial agreement" has not designated Pevely's powers to operate beyond its corporate municipal boundaries and because it has not displaced competition. Thus, the Commission has no jurisdiction over the alleged agreement.

32. Enforcement of § 247.172 RSMo. 2000 as the Complainant seeks would violate the due process rights of the Respondent pursuant to the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and Article 1, Section 10 of the Missouri Constitution.

This affirmative defense is related to Pevely's affirmative defense no. 26 ("The Commission and Complainant have not given any prior notice to the Respondents that it intended to enforce § 247.172 RSMo. 2000, so as to have any application to the alleged agreement.") and no. 27 ("The Commission and the Complainant have failed to give § 247.172 RSMo. 2000 its most liberal interpretation despite the fact that it contains penal provisions.”).

Staff makes the bootstrap argument that Respondents have been afforded due process because the Commission’s rules, procedures and processes have provided Respondents with notice and an opportunity to be heard by its active enforcement.<sup>21</sup> This argument is facile and denies Pevely the opportunity to avoid enforcement. The essence of Pevely’s due process defense is that enforcement of § 247.172 violates due process because the statute is unconstitutionally vague and did not provide Pevely with adequate notice that its entering into an alleged territorial agreement would violate the law.<sup>22</sup> If Pevely had thought that § 247.172 applied to the agreement at issue such that its conduct would be considered to violate the law, it would have sought the Commission’s approval of the agreement.<sup>23</sup> Nor does the offer of Staff to forgo fines if Pevely agrees to submit to the authority of the Commission alter the due process analysis.<sup>24</sup> The simple fact remains that Staff is seeking to enforce a statute against Pevely that did not provide adequate notice that Pevely’s conduct would violate that statute.

That the statute is open for interpretation is supported by the fact that Staff only recently interpreted § 247.172 to apply to the present situation. It has admitted that it has never before interpreted the statute in this way. Pevely had no notice of this interpretation, either by the language of the statute or by the Commission’s prior actions.

33. Complainant and the Commission are estopped to enforce § 247.172 RSMo. 2000, as sought in the Complaint.

Staff erroneously claims that Pevely has not supported its defense of estoppel with any <sup>22</sup> See Conseco Finance Servicing Corp. v. Missouri Dep’t of Revenue, 195 S.W.3d 410, 415 (Mo. banc. 2006) (“Vagueness, as a due process violation, takes two forms. One is the lack of notice given a potential offender because the statute is so unclear that ‘[persons] of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning.’” (citations omitted) (alteration in original)).

factual allegations.<sup>25</sup> Staff's argument asks that Pevely prove a negative. Pevely has alleged that Staff has never attempted to affirmatively exercise jurisdiction over an alleged territorial agreement between a municipal water district and a public water supply district under § 247.172, and Staff has admitted as much. Pevely had a right to rely on the Commission's procedures and methods. By attempting to exercise jurisdiction in this case, the Commission's exercise of authority is inconsistent with its prior procedures and methods. Pevely has thereby been injured in the form of the Staff's Complaint and the potential to face penalties. Staff's affirmative misconduct is demonstrated by the fact that the first notice Pevely received was the service of the Complaint for violating the statute; Pevely never received notice of Staff's new interpretation.

34. Complainant may not seek to enforce § 247.172 RSMo. 2000, as set out in this Complaint by reason of laches.

By Staff's own statements, summary determination on the issue of laches is inappropriate; rather, "laches is a question of fact to be determined from all the evidence and circumstances adduced at trial."<sup>26</sup>

Moreover, Staff erroneously contends that Pevely has pleaded no facts showing that Staff unaccountably neglected to act over a prolonged period of time.<sup>27</sup> As established in response to Pevely's affirmative defense no. 25, the Commission has not previously exercised any authority with respect to the alleged agreement since November 12, 2007. In other words, Staff waited almost six years to bring this Complaint. This is despite the fact that, according to Staff, the Commission has "exclusive authority" to approve territorial agreements under § 247.172,<sup>28</sup> and that Respondents' actions have been "prolonged" and "egregious."<sup>29</sup> Given the "exclusive authority" vested in the Commission to regulate such agreements and the length of time and supposed severity of actions involved, Pevely has shown that Staff "neglect[ed] to act, for an unreasonable and explained length of time, under circumstances permitting diligence, where the law requires action."<sup>30</sup>

Staff is also incorrect in asserting that Pevely has not pleaded any facts showing that it has been unfairly disadvantaged or prejudiced by the delay.<sup>31</sup> Rather, the prejudice to Pevely is evident by the relief requested by Staff in its Complaint – specifically, to "deem each day that such violation existed to be a separate offense and authorize its General Counsel to proceed in Circuit Court to seek such penalties as are authorized by law."<sup>32</sup> Thus, Pevely is prejudiced by the delay in the amount of fees it may bear.

CONCLUSION

Staff has failed to meet its burden on summary determination because it has failed to prove the viability of its claim as well as prove that Pevely's affirmative defenses fail as a matter of law. To the contrary, each of Pevely's affirmative defenses discussed above remains as a barrier to summary determination because Staff has not negated either the factual or legal basis behind the assertions.<sup>33</sup>
